Key note speakers;

"Skills for the future – in the age of smart machines"

Stefan Fölster, Director of the Reform Institute and Assoc Prof in economics at the Royal Institute of Technology, in Stockholm.

He is the author of numerous books and articles on labour markets, education and other topics. His book "The public wealth of nations" (Palgrave/Macmillan) was listed by the Economist and Financial Times as one of their "Best books of the year 2015". In recent years his research has increasingly focused on the effects of digitalization on labour markets and living standard. He has recently published a Swedish book on the "Robot revolution", and another book is forthcoming on "Future Jobs".

"Labour skills migration – for growth and prosperity"

Mike Dawe, Board Director for Global Skills Development at City & Guilds

City&Guilds is a leading skills development organisation with offices around the world supporting training providers, employers and trainees. In his presentation Mike will focus on the highly topical issue regarding global patterns and challenges of migration and its impact on nations, employers and individuals. He will share results from a new research study about employer perception of migration and its impact on business.
